Legal Responsibility and the Nurse

TODAY the professional nurse may be held personally responsible in law should any mishap or error of judgment cause harm to a patient. This is a fact that is both appreciated as compatible with the dignity and competence of a profession, and respected as a fearful responsibility. That a responsibility involving life or death may be placed not only on the senior members of the profession but also, through force of circumstance, be delegated to the inexperienced and unqualified student makes the matter of even greater seriousness.

The Royal College of Nursing realizes the potential dangers, for its members and for the good name of the profession, which arise from legal responsibility being placed on the nurse. It has been particularly concerned over the position which arises when, at the requirement of the medical, pharmaceutical, or laboratory staff, the nurse undertakes a procedure or task outside her recognized professional duties. The College, therefore, set up a working party to study the whole position and have circulated to regional hospital boards the memorandum[1] prepared on this subject, also one on the revised 'Consent to Operation Form'[2] which states that the patient not only consents but that he knows 'the type of operation' he is to undergo, and 'the effect or nature of which has been explained' to him. This responsibility is apparently being placed in some hospitals upon the nursing staff.

Perhaps the greatest single complaint of the patient of today is that he is not adequately informed of his own illness, his operation or special treatment, and his probable progress. This suggests an essential failure to recognize the patient as a whole person responsible for his own life. Is it not the responsibility of the medical profession to see that the patient understands—to the extent to which he is able to benefit from that understanding—what is wrong with his health, and in what way he can co-operate with the health team in order to regain his own health or the power to live with his disability?

The nurse has for years been the liaison between the patient and his fears and the physician or surgeon and his silence. But, she has not been held responsible for explaining to the patient the nature or extent of his illness or his treatment. Where, however, a matter becomes a routine procedure, it is soon delegated to the staff who are mainly responsible for routine care—the nurses. But consent for a particular operation to be performed cannot be considered as routine, and this particular 'consent form'—which, if signed, may safeguard the doctor—if unsigned, may mean a serious omission and an example of that 'conspiracy of silence'. In either case it is not the nurse's responsibility.

On the subject of procedures outside the nurse's professional scope, the task of obtaining a specimen of blood from a vein or of giving an intravenous injection may be taken as specific examples. The General Nursing Council syllabus requires the nurse to be able to prepare for such tasks but not to carry them out. That many sisters can and do take samples of blood—particularly in antenatal clinics—is a fact which may be used to obscure the basic principles of: (i) whether it is the nurse's duty, and (ii) whether it is in the best interest of the patient. No one would wish the sister to be unable to carry out such a task in an emergency, but must she, as has been suggested in a letter by a doctor, published in The Lancet of June 13, act as relief to the busy house-officer, instead of carrying out her nursing duties?

The nurse has no wish to become a technician, but she would expect to contribute her service in the best interests of the patient on all occasions. It is thus that she may be faced with the position of carrying out a procedure beyond her professional duties and in such an instance the hospital authorities should assume responsibility.

Meanwhile, according to the British Medical Journal of May 30, the Consulting Pathologists Group Committee have decided that if a sister is taught personally by the pathologist she may then be delegated the duty—'although ultimately a medical duty'—of obtaining a blood specimen. In the Committee's opinion 'it is always advisable to regard a technician or nurse incompetent in this respect until the pathologist or clinician has personally satisfied himself otherwise'. There is much more in this vein, but the evidence is that the pathologists are willing to hand over this medical duty and its legal responsibility—while the nurse is invited to accept more duties and more responsibility to add to the over-heavy burden she already carries to the detriment of her own work and the nursing care of the patients.

Fortunately the leading article in The Lancet of June 6—The Nurse's Responsibility—has clearly taken the opposite stand and endorses all that the Royal College of Nursing has urged, pointing out that 'nursing and medicine are two different disciplines' and concluding its excellent statement of the position with the words: 'We should see quite clearly what we are doing when we delegate one of our tasks to a nurse: we are putting her in a false and dangerous position which may result in damage to her professional reputation, and we may be hindering her in her duty to her patients.'

TOPICAL NOTES

Gift for Research

A MUNIFICENT GIFT to the nursing profession and, indirectly, for the benefit of patients, has been made by the trustees of the Dan Mason Medical Research Trust, through the medium of the National Florence Nightingale Memorial Committee. The gift takes the form of a grant of £2,000 per annum for two years for research into the basic education of nurses and the methods of training and nursing techniques. A Dan Mason Nursing Research Sub-Committee of the National Florence Nightingale Memorial Committee is to be set up to implement the terms of the Trust Deed.

Penicillin Sensitivity

PUBLICITY HAS BEEN GIVEN to the occupational hazard of penicillin through a question asked last week in Parliament (see page 654). The occurrence of penicillin sensitivity in a small proportion of persons, particularly doctors and nurses, has been recorded during the last few years, and apparently occurs in varying instances: for example, after it has been used safely over a long period, or when the nurse is not actually administering it herself. Streptomycin is a more serious risk, but for district nurses in particular penicillin sensitivity makes a practical nursing post almost impossible. Some have already transferred to other branches of the profession such as mental nursing work or the care of the aged; but the problem is one that requires a general ruling and the advice from the Minister of Health, prepared after careful study of all the factors, is awaited with concern. We hope to publish an article on the medical aspects in a future issue of the journal.

Matron, Royal Free Hospital

THE APPOINTMENT of Miss Elizabeth Hardman, S.R.N., S.C.M., Housekeeping Certificate, as matron of the Royal Free Hospital, London, has recently been announced. Miss Hardman, who will take up her new appointment on September 1, has been matron of St. Margaret's Hospital, Epping, and Honey Lane Hospital, Waltham Abbey, Essex, since 1949. She trained at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London, at Kingston County Hospital and Lord Mayor Treloar Hospital, Alton, Hants. Her previous posts have been those of ward sister, Cirencester War Memorial Hospital; assistant matron and sister tutor, Metropolitan Hospital, Kingsland Road, London, E.7, and matron, Guest Hospital, Dudley, Worcestershire. We congratulate her on her new appointment and wish her every success. Miss J. Addison, whom she succeeds, has undertaken a three-month tour in the United States, Canada, Switzerland and Germany, during which she will visit many hospitals and schools of nursing before assuming her new duties as matron of Guy's Hospital in September.

Tuberculosis and Work

WELL OVER 300 PEOPLE from many parts of the country and working in the many services concerned with the prevention and treatment of tuberculosis, came last week to listen to a two-hour forum, arranged at B.M.A. House by the National Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, on the social needs of the tuberculosis patient. Originally intended as an intimate policy-making meeting of the Medico-Social Section, this conference had grown under its own impetus to such a size that it filled the Great Hall of the building. Many interesting questions, some selected from those sent beforehand and some from the floor, were ably answered, under the chairmanship of Mrs. D. Hicks, almoner, Churchill Hospital, Oxford, by Miss S. Buchanan, superintendent health visitor, Northamptonshire; Dr. Peter Edwards, medical superintendent, Cheshire Joint Sanatorium; Mr. R. Gaster, almoner, Fulham Chest Clinic; Miss M. E. Jackson, group resettlement officer, Ministry of Labour; Dr. J. J. Laurier, assistant medical director, Sacred Heart Hospital, Montreal (a 900 bed hospital, 600 for tuberculosis and 280 for orthopaedics), and Dr. H. J. Trenchard, chest physician, Edgware Chest Clinic. The answers given showed that the team considered that lack of sheltered employment was largely due to the fact that employees—not necessarily management—were afraid of infection. More publicity and education of the general public was therefore needed and it was suggested that the disablement resettlement officers should attempt this task in the factories. On the question of work for wives, Miss Buchanan suggested that the health of families in which there was tuberculosis needed guarding even more than usual—women, as a whole, might be more able than was generally supposed, but to do an outside job as well was under these circumstances asking too much.

Ceremony at Paddington Hospital

A DELIGHTFUL CEREMONY took place at Paddington Hospital, W.9, when Miss Celia Johnson (the celebrated actress of stage and screen who has recently gripped playgoers by her performance in The Deep Blue Sea) opened the new nurses' recreation hall and the Coronation garden recently laid out in the hospital grounds. Miss Johnson was welcomed by Col. W. Parkes, D.S.O., M.C., the Mayor of Paddington, Alderman F. Lawrence, J.P., L.C.C., and Miss A. Henry, matron of the hospital. Alderman Lawrence, as chairman of the hospital management committee, expressed their gratitude to the Borough of Paddington who had presented two garden seats to grace the new garden. After Miss Celia Johnson had formally declared open the beautiful recreation hall, the considerable company present adjourned to the new garden where Miss Johnson ceremonially cut a red, white and blue ribbon stretched across the gateway. Miss Johnson—who has, of course, an added claim to fame as the wife of Peter Fleming, the author—was besieged by autograph-seeking nurses and photographers, both amateur and professional, for whom she laughingly posed. The garden, already gay with tall purple irises and other June flowers, was admired and the guests were then entertained to tea in the nurses' home by matron.

Opening of St. Monica's Hospital

Mr. MAURICE ORBACH, M.P., deputised for Lord Amulree (who was indisposed) in performing the opening ceremony of the reconstructed hospital building, St. Monica's, Brondesbury Park, Willesden, N.W.6. In its new guise—and completely reconstructed, re-decorated and equipped throughout—St.

Monica's, which was formerly a small children's hospital, will now provide 35 beds for the elderly sick, badly needed in the Central Middlesex Group of which this hospital forms a part. St. Monica's will be staffed by a sister-in-charge, Miss F. Grimwood, a day and a night sister, three staff nurses and 10 assistant nurses. The wards are all small—none has more than eight beds, and there are some two-bedded ones; they are light, bright and airy, and throughout there are cream walls picked out with coral pink beading. A wide sun-flooded balcony runs the whole length of the first floor of the building. The opening ceremony was held out of doors on a brilliant day, and the Mayor of Willesden, Councillor Horace Thorley, and Mr. F. J. Ballard, chairman of the management committee, also spoke. All three speakers emphasized the hope that the future patients of St. Monica's would be cured and rehabilitated and enabled to return to as active a life as possible among their families and friends.

Royal College of Midwives

FOLLOWING THE SERVICE at St. Stephen's Church, Rochester Row, the Royal College of Midwives held its annual meeting at Caxton Hall, Westminster, on June 18. Miss N. B. Deane, M.B.E., President of the College, presided; also present, with members of the Council on the platform, were Mrs. F. R. Mitchell, O.B.E., Miss M. Liddiard, C.B.E., and Miss E. M. Pye. Miss Deane, being reappointed President for the coming year, in her address said that the midwife was today not a lone worker but was united with a great team. A tremendous welcome greeted Mrs. Mitchell, former general secretary, when Miss Deane called on her to accept the gift of an inscribed, solid silver tray and a cheque for over £1,000 from members and friends. Mrs. Mitchell, in expressing her thanks for a gift whose magnitude she found overwhelming, spoke of the privilege and pleasure she had felt to work for the College, and of her happy association with so many true friends for so many years. Miss Pye also spoke of Mrs. Mitchell's work, saying she had called out the very best. In the evening the London County Council gave a reception in honour of the members and friends of the Royal College of Midwives, the guests being received by the Vice-chairman of the Council, Mrs. I. M. Bolton and Mr. Bolton, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Lawrence and Miss N. B. Deane. The Council Chamber and models of the Coronation regalia were on view and the film Capital County was shown. Members enjoyed the terrace overlooking the Thames and the lights of London on one of the few fine evenings of the month. A report of the meeting will appear next week.

Leisure Time Competition

CLOSING DATE

July 1 is the closing date for the Annual Leisure Time Competition, organized by the Student Nurses' Association and the Nursing Times, for an original water colour.

Minister Meets the Doctors

THE RT. HON. IAIN MACLEOD, M.P., Minister of Health, had a rousing reception when he addressed a large assembly of medical men at the Annual Conference of Local Medical Committees held at British Medical Association House, London. In particular, the Minister sought to enlist the support of the medical profession in combating the rising annual costs of the nation's drug bill under the National Health Service. It had risen from £31½ millions in 1949-50 to an estimated figure of £46½ millions in 1953-54, and one of the principal reasons for the increase was the larger proportion of proprietary medicines prescribed; other reasons were the introduction of effective but expensive new drugs and the rise in price of many ingredients. Mr. Macleod said it was realized that some of the newer discoveries involved drugs that were available only in a proprietary form, but pointed out that enormous saving to the Health Service could be achieved if non-proprietary preparations, when they were equally effective, could be used instead, even if the patient's preference was for the proprietary drug. Doctors could also help, said Mr. Macleod, by refraining from prescribing unreasonably large quantities of a drug or dressing, which might later be wasted. A warm response was forthcoming from the large audience—not only for these suggestions, but for the sympathetic attitude towards current problems of the medical profession evinced by the Minister. In particular, Mr. Macleod pleaded for the free access to the hospital for the general practitioner. "He should be assured of a welcome there, for whatever reason he visits it—and not by favour, but by right", the Minister declared.

NEUROLOGICAL SURGERY—I

by J. M. Small, M.B., Ch.B., F.R.C.S., Consultant Adviser in Neurosurgery to the Birmingham Regional Hospital Board; Surgeon to the Department of Neurosurgery, the United Birmingham Hospitals.

ABOUT 65 YEARS AGO the first pioneer efforts in the surgery of the nervous system were made in this country. The first brain tumour was operated upon by Bennett, and the first spinal cord tumour was removed by Sir Victor Horsley in London. The latter operation miraculously cured a man completely paraplegic, who recovered full function in his legs and lived to walk and hunt. In Glasgow Sir William McEwen had also removed a meningioma from the brain surface, and was well under way with localization of brain abscesses and their treatment. The research work of Sir Charles Sherrington was paving the way to an understanding of the localization and function of various parts of the brain and spinal cord.

It is very right that we should always remember the part that British surgeons have played in the development of neurological surgery, for many of the advances have been made in other countries. At the end of the last century Halstead, in America, was perfecting an immaculate technique in general surgery, followed closely by the application of this technique to operations upon the nervous system by Harvey Cushing. In 1918 Walter Dandy in America had seen the possibility of using air injections to demonstrate deformities of the ventricular cavities of the brain, and by 1925 people were using this method all over the world to demonstrate the presence of abscesses and tumours of the brain. This great advance in the localization of brain disease was soon followed by the work of Egas Moniz of Lisbon who after much research evolved a method of demonstrating on X-ray the arteries and veins of the brain, and opened up a new field of diagnosis, not only of tumours and abscesses but also of vascular abnormalities and disturbances. In France, Sicard and Forestier had introduced a radio-opaque method of investigating the spinal canal.

Most of the work in the past has been aimed at the removal of compressing tumours, clots, or abscesses from the nervous system, but more latterly methods of removal of varying areas of the brain have been investigated and used in the treatment of epilepsy and mental disorders, and the division of varying portions of the nervous system used for the relief of intractable pain. This rapid advance in knowledge and technique is not at an end, nor does it represent a fully established scheme, so that neurosurgery today is part treatment and part accumulation of knowledge and advancement of techniques. It is this fusion of art, established scientific methods and investigation which makes the subject so fascinating to all who are involved. In neurological surgery good nursing is still as important as it used to be in pneumonia before the days of chemotherapy; it plays a vast part in the care of the neurosurgical patient, and these patients in their recovery are living proof not only of surgical treatment, but also of nursing care.

Demands on Neurological Services

To many the range and value of neurological surgery remains unknown, and a clear perspective of this is necessary before a more detailed consideration of diagnosis and treatment can be undertaken. The great majority of the work is concerned with tumours, infections, injuries, and disturbances of blood vessels within the skull and spine which are the bony cage of the central nervous system. Although when unconcentrated the amount of these diseases may not appear great, the demands upon neurosurgical services in this country are well beyond their resources; most neurosurgeons are asked to see more cases every week than they can possibly treat; these would probably include five or six brain or spinal tumours, a brain abscess, and about the same number of other disorders requiring surgical treatment. About a quarter of the patients admitted to neurosurgical beds are emergency admissions, most of them suffering from brain abscess, subarachnoid haemorrhage or a complication such as a clot formation from a head injury. These facts show the great demand that exists, and we must now see what neurosurgery offers these patients. In some sections of the profession unconnected with diseases of the nervous system, there remains a dismal and defeatist attitude as unreal and misinformed as it is unjust and untrue.

Tumours causing disturbance of the brain fall into three main groups. Forty per cent. are intrinsic tumours of the brain supportive tissue cells or glia and therefore termed gliomata; there are a number of varieties, but only about one quarter are in any way amenable to surgery. Another 40 per cent. are entirely benign extracerebral tumours arising from the meninges, cranial nerves, or pituitary gland, and causing their harmful effects by compression of the brain; these can be removed with a mortality rate of no more than about 8 per cent. in all cases, whatever the extent of progress before surgical treatment. The other 20 per cent. is a mixed group of rare congenital tumours, amenable to surgery, and malignant tumours invading the brain or its confines from elsewhere in the body as a terminal phase in lethal generalized malignancy. Tumours causing disturbances of the spinal cord are even more surgically satisfying, for 60 per cent. are benign extrinsic tumours, fully amenable to complete removal and recovery.

Intracranial infection, usually secondary to infections of the ear or paranasal sinuses, is a common condition, and modern chemotherapy has resulted in more cases surviving the immediate acute infective process. With overwhelming infection partially controlled, the need for surgical management to assist the natural processes of localization of the infection has increased, while the results of evacuation of loculated pus from within the skull and brain have become so good that the non-recovery of such cases is regarded with great distress by the neurological surgeon. In the early stages of brain infection there is merely oedema around the area of encephalitis, much like the swelling on a hand around an area of cellulitis. During this stage the pressure within the skull may rise so much that some form of decompression may be necessary to save the patient's life and allow the natural process of localization of the infection to form a pus-containing abscess. This pus is then removed by repeated aspiration through a needle. The abscess gradually shrinks without severe damage occurring to the overlying brain, and if necessary the small fibrous capsule can be removed when all inflammatory processes have subsided.

Injuries to the head not only damage the brain and its coverings by the direct violence of the injury but may also lead to a number of progressive complications requiring treatment. Blood clots may develop acutely between the skull and dura mater, requiring urgent removal to save life, or more slowly beneath the dura mater, in the elderly after quite trivial injuries, forming the so-called chronic subdural haematoma. Sometimes fractures of the skull involve the air sinuses in communication with the nose, such as the frontal sinus, and when the meninges are torn at the same time a channel is opened between the nose and the intracranial contents. This may lead to a persistent, or intermittent, discharge of cerebrospinal fluid from the nostril, and worse than this, infection from the nose may spread inwards to give rise to meningitis or a brain abscess. When a patient with cerebrospinal rhinorrhoea sneezes, air may be blown inside the skull, and even into the brain. It was such a case in which the air had actually reached the ventricles of the brain, demonstrating them clearly on an X-ray picture, that stimulated the development of ventriculography.

Fig. 2. Air inside the skull and in the ventricles of the brain. This had gained access through a fracture in the frontal sinus. Following closure of the tear in the dura mater the patient made a perfect recovery.

Fig. 3. Patients who have had treatment for (left to right) subarachnoid haemorrhage; removal of eighth nerve tumour; removal of disc cartilage protrusion, and (seated) removal of left temporal lobe abscess.

Pain is a fundamental symptom of many diseases, and it is a symptom which makes its sufferers most anxious for treatment. In some cases there is an underlying disease which may be removed or treated and the pain will disappear. Such a condition is intractable sciatica due to an intervertebral disc tear and protrusion pressing upon one of the nerve roots forming the sciatic nerve. Removal of such a dislocated portion of disc cartilage will cure the sciatic pain. These disc dislocations occur almost exclusively in the mobile portion of the spine; the low lumbar and the low cervical areas, and neuritic type of pain in the leg and arm are commonly due to this condition. There are other causes of pain which cannot be removed, and then the treatment of the pain itself becomes justifiable, indeed essential. The cause may be obvious but incurable, as in malignant disease with secondary deposits, or unknown as in trigeminal neuralgia.

Drugs may be quite incapable of stemming the dreadfulness of the pain in these conditions, and interruption of the nerves or pathways in the nervous system becomes the only method of treatment. Sensory nerves to the painful area may be temporarily destroyed by the injection of alcohol, or exposed and divided at operation; both these methods are used in the treatment of trigeminal neuralgia. In the spinal cord the fibres carrying pain sensation to the brain and consciousness are grouped closely together, and may be divided to remove pain sense from halves or quadrants of the body, but leaving the sensation of touch and all other functions undisturbed. Such operations are of great value in the treatment of pain arising from malignant disease, and give many months of relief from the horror of dreadful pain.

In the past many young adults have died or been permanently disabled by intracranial haemorrhages occurring from aneurysms or other abnormalities of the cerebral blood vessels. The method of outlining these vessels and abnormalities on X-ray, known as angiography, has enabled full investigation of these conditions, and treatments designed to suit individual cases. The removal of blood clots resulting from rupture of these vascular abnormalities, ligation of vessels feeding them, or removal of the abnormality, when this is possible, has reduced the mortality, the extent of disabilities, and likelihood of recurrence of haemorrhage.

The accumulation of knowledge about the brain and its function leads to speculation upon the possibility of modifying the emotions and behaviour of people suffering from severe neurotic and psychotic states. In 1935 Moniz and Lima in Portugal started to interrupt the fibres passing from the frontal lobes of the brain, and since then varying methods of interrupting the white matter of the frontal lobes, therefore called leucotomy, have been used. States of severe agitation and depression are greatly helped by this operation, but the search goes on for specific areas of the brain which may be removed to give specific changes in the emotions and personality.

This short essay describes briefly the wide scope of neurological surgery, and the type of problem which is the everyday work of a neurosurgeon. The descriptions of disease, its diagnosis and treatment, may appear in this short compass rather remote and essentially scientific; but all the endeavour of investigation and advance of knowledge are applied for the relief of human suffering, and the cure or amelioration of symptoms in people suffering from diseases affecting the nervous system.

The Relationship of Child-Bearing and Child-Rearing to Pulmonary Tuberculosis*

by DAVID L. PUGH, M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P.; Chest Physician, Mid-Kent Area, South East Metropolitan Regional Hospital Board; Honorary Clinical Assistant, Brompton Hospital.

THE relationship of child-bearing and child-rearing to pulmonary tuberculosis is one of the most perplexing controversial problems of medicine. In early times it was believed that pregnancy was the best cure for consumption, a belief that was held up to the 19th century when the opinion prevailed that pregnancy was harmful when it complicated pulmonary tuberculosis. This led to the practice of therapeutic abortion in all pregnant tuberculous females.

In 1935, however, Krause[1] concluded that 'pregnancy exerts a harmful effect on pulmonary tuberculosis in women who without tuberculosis would tolerate pregnancy poorly and exerts a harmless effect upon those tuberculous women who without tuberculosis would tolerate pregnancy well.' Jacobs[2] in 1946 stated that pulmonary tuberculosis stands first among all causes of death in women of child-bearing age, though the bulk of evidence indicates that in minimal and quiescent lesions pregnancy exerts no harmful effect but in cases of more active disease it may be harmful in a proportion of cases. Furthermore in 1945 Meixner[3] in a study of the subject concluded that it had not been definitely shown that pregnancy is good for a tuberculous woman in any stage of tuberculosis, and while most investigators believe pregnancy can and does aggravate an early or arrested lesion unless proper therapy is followed, everyone admits that pregnancy places a severe strain on a tuberculous woman's resources and strength and that labour is fraught with immediate and remote perils not present in a normal woman.

Oxenham[4] in 1941 records on reviewing the literature an unanimity of opinion by workers in tuberculosis that the treatment of the tuberculous lesion should be the first object in management of these cases and that therapeutic abortion should be rarely, if ever employed, because results equally good can be obtained without sacrificing the life of a healthy baby for the dubious benefit to an unhealthy and perhaps doomed mother. In 1946 Cohen[5] stated that in his experience at Black Notley, the number of patients showing retrogression while in hospital was hardly a higher proportion than would be expected to occur in women of similar age group, social circumstances and extent of disease in the absence of pregnancy.

Thus there emerges the crucial factor—the task of deciding whether the particular tuberculous patient at any one time can tolerate the particular strain of child-bearing and child-rearing.

Many theories have been advanced about the influence child-bearing and child-rearing may have on the tuberculous lesion and may be summarized as follows.

(a) Pregnancy

i. Chemical factors, which include depletion of calcium and elevation of the blood cholesterol. From the present state of knowledge it is not possible to give a conclusive opinion on the effect of either of these conditions on the tuberculous lesion.

ii. Mechanical factors. Untoward displacement of the diaphragm may limit the expansion of the lung but it has been shown by Cohen[5] that compression on the lungs by the pregnant uterus is compensated for by an increase in the width of the thoracic cage, and the rise of the diaphragm occurring late in pregnancy is not comparable to that obtained by a pneumoperitoneum with or without phrenic crush. Furthermore Friedman and Garber[6] quote from the work of Heynemann and more recently McGinty that the mobility of the diaphragm is not restricted by the pregnant uterus.

In addition, the excess physical work of carrying the pregnant uterus and the strain of labour may both place an additional stress upon the tuberculous mother.

iii. Social, economic and environmental conditions play a part in the progress or arrest of any tuberculous lesion and the added complication of pregnancy tends to weight the scales against resistance to the disease.

(b) The Puerperium

There is no evidence at present that any condition peculiar to the puerperium itself independent of lactation exerts a deleterious effect upon tuberculosis.

(c) Child-rearing

The child-rearing period is one of great stress in the life of a healthy mother and if to this is added the strain of overcoming a chronic infection it may well be appreciated that the patient's reserves of energy and resistance may be depleted. The role played by the hormones in this condition is too vast a subject for the scope of this present article.

Scheme for the Management of Cases

1. The position of the obstetrician. In the early months of pregnancy if toxaemia occurs then therapeutic abortion may be necessary because of the untoward effect on the tuberculosis. The delivery should be made as easy as obstetric skill may allow and a prolonged and difficult labour must be avoided. In the post-partum period nursing of the child should not be allowed and lactation should be suppressed as soon as possible. A prolonged lying-in period of rest is indicated.

2. The position of the chest physician. Each individual case has to be considered from the standpoint of the following factors:

i. the type and activity of the lesion and the duration of the disease;

ii. the psychological reactions of the mother and her capacity to co-operate in treatment;

iii. the physical and emotional strain which the mother endures in the care of the infant;

iv. the possibility of active and vigorous treatment of the patient either in an institution or at home.

Type and Activity of Lesion

In early or minimal active lesions, if the lesion is controlled by bed-rest and collapse therapy or chemotherapy, the pregnancy may be allowed to proceed. If the disease progresses under these conditions then interruption of the pregnancy is indicated before the end of the third month followed by active treatment of the tuberculosis.

In advanced disease the choice may be between preserving the life of either mother or child instead of saving the lives of both. If the woman wishes to risk all for the sake of a living child she should be allowed to do so, for her prognosis is usually poor irrespective of the pregnancy.

Quiescent and arrested lesions should be watched carefully until labour, with frequent clinical and radiological assessment.

The psychological management of the pregnant tuberculous woman should not be neglected and she should be encouraged to think of her pregnancy and labour as an important incident in her tuberculous career and not as a potential source of devastating breakdown.

In patients found to have active tuberculosis during pregnancy or after delivery the prognosis is not so good as in those tuberculous women under treatment who become pregnant. Though the routine examination in antenatal clinics reveals a low incidence of tuberculous disease there is little doubt that the inclusion of an X-ray examination in the antenatal examination would prevent the tragedies occurring in undiagnosed cases who have not been protected by being placed under the most favourable conditions for treatment and supervision.

Child-rearing constitutes a strain upon the mother as great as, if not greater than child-bearing, and the adverse influence of this on the tuberculosis should be reduced as far as possible. Lactation should not be permitted because the loss of nutritive materials to the nursing infant may be a serious drain upon the mother. Add to this the social and economic factors, the task of caring for the infant, the work, the added responsibility while the mother is below par physically, and there arises a serious strain for many tuberculous women who cannot be relieved of the burden. In those cases where the child has to return to the home of the mother, domestic help and financial assistance in the home must be provided as well as the valuable supervision of health visitors.

The child must be separated from the mother at birth for postnatal infection is a real danger. The mother may see her child daily but if she is infectious she should not handle the child. Breast-feeding should only be allowed in those cases where the mother's disease is quiescent or arrested, and should not be allowed in active lesions. BCG vaccination for the infant should be offered to protect against future infection when returning home.

Summary

Child-bearing and child-rearing affect some patients with tuberculosis unfavourably and should be looked upon as a potential hazard for a tuberculous mother.

The management of such cases consists of active anti-tuberculosis therapy based upon bed-rest, a ' super ' brand of obstetrics for the management of the pregnancy, and vigilant postnatal supervision of mother and child. Therapeutic abortion should only be practised in retrogressing tuberculous lesions or in cases where too frequent pregnancies cause re-activation of inactive disease. Contraception should be undertaken to prevent too frequent pregnancies unless religious scruples forbid.

Finally each individual case must be evaluated on its own merits including physiological, psychological and pathological as well as social and economic factors.

National Health Service Teaching Hospital Appointments

APPOINTMENTS, mainly to fill vacancies caused by the retirement in rotation of one third of the members, have been made to the Boards of Governors of the 26 London Teaching Hospitals by the Minister of Health. Members of these Boards will serve in a voluntary capacity. Tenure of office will be for three years until March 31, 1956. Another one third of the members will retire on March 31, 1954. Total memberships of the Boards, excluding chairmen, is 643. Those newly appointed for each Board are as follows.

St. Bartholomew's Hospital: Geoffrey Laydon Keynes (London); Lord Hardinge of Penshurst (Kent) (appointed to March 31, 1954).

The London Hospital: Miss Irene Dowling (London).

Royal Free Hospital: Miss M. E. Craven (London); the Hon. Mrs. Gilmour (Bentworth, Hants.); Professor E. M. Killick (London).

University College Hospital: one appointment outstanding.

The Middlesex Hospital: H. Wilkes Harvey, J.P., F.R.C.S. (London); F. D. Howitt, C.V.O., M.A., B.Ch., M.D., F.R.C.P. (London); R. V. Hudson, F.R.C.S. (London); A. C. Morson, O.B.E., F.R.C.S. (London).

Charing Cross Hospital: Lieut. Col. C. E. G. B. Goad, M.C. (Rickmansworth); Professor W. J. Hamilton (London); Harry Hutchinson (London).

St. George's Hospital: Professor T. Crawford, M.D., M.R.C.P. (London); V. H. Riddell, M.D., F.R.C.S. (London).

Westminster Hospital: two appointments outstanding.

St. Mary's Hospital: D. F. Hutchinson, O.B.E., M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P. (London); G. L. M. McElligott, M.A., M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P. (Bushey Heath, Herts.)

Guy's Hospital: Brigadier Archer Clive (Ross, Herefordshire); A. E. Orchard-Lisle (London).

King's College Hospital: Mrs. M. E. Davis, J.P., (Sevenoaks). One appointment outstanding.

St. Thomas's Hospital: R. H. Boggon, M.B., M.S., F.R.C.S. (London); Mrs. Margaret Mitchiner (London); Dr. John S. Richardson, M.V.O. (London).

Hammersmith, West London and St. Mark's Hospitals: R. H. Franklin, F.R.C.S. (London). One appointment outstanding.

The Hospital for Sick Children: Dr. Edith Batho (Surrey).

National Hospital for Nervous Diseases: Sir Charles Putnam Symonds, K.C.B., C.B., M.A., D.M., F.R.C.P. (London); Harvey Jackson, F.R.C.S. (London); Sir John Woods (London).

Moorfields, Westminster and Central Eye Hospital: P. McG. Moffatt, F.R.C.S., M.R.C.P. (London); Lady Dunbar-Nasmith, C.B.E. (London).

Bethlem Royal and Maudsley Hospitals: T. S. Stigger (Canterbury). One appointment outstanding.

St. Johns' Hospital for Diseases of the Skin: no new members.

Hospital for Diseases of the Chest: the Hon. Michael Astor (Oxon.); J. W. Randall Nation, J.P. (London). One appointment outstanding.

Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital: Angus Mackinnon, D.S.O., M.C. (Hampshire) (until March 31, 1955).

National Heart Hospital: one appointment outstanding.

Royal National Throat, Nose and Ear Hospital: A. C. Crouch (London).

Royal Cancer Hospital: Sir Edgar Sylvester, K.B.E., F.C.A. (Bucks.)

Queen Charlotte's and Chelsea Hospitals: Briant Evans, M.A., M.B., F.R.C.S., B.Chir., M.R.C.O.G. (London); S. G. Clayton, M.D., M.S., F.R.C.S., F.R.C.O.G. (Surrey); Richard Dutton Forshaw (Surrey) (until March 31, 1955).

The Eastern Dental Hospital: Ivor R. H. Kramer, L.D.S. R.C.S. (Eng.) (Richmond, Surrey.)

St. Peters and St. Pauls Hospitals: A. W. Badenoch, M.A., M.D., Ch.M., F.R.C.S. (London); J. D. Fergusson, M.D., F.R.C.S. (London). One appointment outstanding.

The Future Work of the Health Visitor*

by J. M. CALDER, M.B.E., S.R.N., S.C.M., H.V.Cert., Chief Nursing Officer, London County Council.

BEING neither a diviner nor a crystal-gazer, I feel rather unequal to forecasting the future, but there are a number of indications or trends or pointers which perhaps help to show the way. Some of these pointers come from Cardiff where ever since July 1948 Dr. Greenwood Wilson, medical officer of health, has been showing the world how an enlightened authority under informed leadership can implement Sections 22, 24 and 28 of the National Health Service Act, 1946. We all know how and why the health visitor came into being—that her success as a health teacher has been the result of the contact she has been able to make with mothers in their own homes, as illustrated by the Indian saying: 'Teach a man and you teach an individual—teach a woman and you teach a family'. We know too that a dull woman never makes a good health visitor; that to be really successful she must be one who in appearance and personality is herself a good health propagandist. She must be able to make friends easily, to inspire and win confidence and to be a good listener. She must also be able to put herself in the place of the harassed, driven or shiftless mother, understand her difficulties and never lose faith in the value of her own work.

Do you see what a paragon I expect our health visitor to be? But, before 1948, the average health visitor built up her technique in isolation. She was expected to develop the art of interviewing in her own way; instead of being taught methods and techniques—visual aids and so on—she had to learn by trial and error. The records she was required to keep were sketchy and limited; no one—not even the medical officer of health—bothered much to look at them or expected to obtain any useful information from them.

The pre-1948 health visitor hardly knew the general practitioner in her area, or, if she did, he and she preserved an armed neutrality towards one another and except where he undertook a session in the maternity and child welfare centre they rarely, if ever, met for consultation.

Between the health visitor and her hospital nursing and medical colleagues there yawned a gulf which from time to time she tried to bridge by arranging meetings of public health nurses within the precincts of the local hospital, but they were half-hearted affairs and the health visitor was usually left feeling that she was a kind of step-daughter in her profession, with her hospital colleagues in a more favoured position.

Progress Achieved

I draw this rather dark picture mainly to show you what progress has been made in achieving some of the objects for which public health nurses of my generation have worked during the last 30 years and, in contrast, to try to indicate where the health visitor's main function will be in the future. The emphasis on curative medicine in the National Health Service Act has meant the temporary eclipse of public health and social medicine; this of course has had its effect on the medical personnel of the public health service. It is inevitable that what depresses the medical officer of health should also depress his nursing colleagues and subordinates.

The World Health Organization has defined health as a 'state of complete physical, mental and social well-being and not merely an absence of disease or infirmity'. Unfortunately the nation has become obsessed with the idea that to cure all is the be all and end all of existence, and so the higher ideal of preventive medicine and positive health becomes an ever-receding goal. The idea seems to be that if you only cure enough people of illness there will be no illness left and only health will remain. It may not be inappropriate at this stage to quote some lines Sir Winston Churchill used just before America entered the last war, when Britain was as much in the doldrums as preventive medicine is today.

The lines I want to quote are these and I use them not in the sense that Sir Winston used them, but rather as a beacon for the future:

> 'In front the sun climbs slow, so slowly,
> But westward look, the land is bright.'

Spearheads of Health

Why am I optimistic about health visiting? Because if we accept the definition of health as expounded by the World Health Organization, then the director and co-ordinator of the services which will secure the 'physical, mental and social well-being' of every person in the community is the medical officer of health, and his ideal apostle (or spearhead if you like) is the woman basically trained as a nurse with a further grounding in the medico-social aspects of family case work and health education. Why, then, if this is so, does health visiting lack the recruits it needs and why does it as a profession compare unfavourably with other allied professions supposed to possess better prestige and provide more generous financial reward? There are many reasons for this but slowly and almost imperceptibly they are being removed. As I see it, the first major factor which put public health nursing 'on the map' was the Report of the Working Party on the Recruitment and Training of Nurses. This emphasized beyond any doubt the need for including in the basic training of all nurses an introduction to the public health services and the social aspects of disease. After a lapse of five years since the publication of that Report, the General Nursing Council for England and Wales has revised its syllabus to include these subjects, which will become compulsory as from January 1954. This is a very important step forward.

The second major factor is the united efforts of the Health Visitor's Examination Committee of the Royal Sanitary Institute and the Standing Conference of Health Visitor Training Centres to persuade the Ministry of Health to set up an investigating committee to consider the whole question of the recruitment, selection and work for health visitors, which now looks like a possibility in the near future.

The Report of the Nuffield Trust on its enquiry into public health nursing, circulated confidentially, provides a small sample of the work undertaken by public health nurses about 18 months ago. This reveals strikingly heavy case loads in some areas, duplication of function between one public health nurse and another and, generally speaking, the uneconomic and wasteful use of trained nursing power.

There is also the woman-power situation generally, which during the next few years will worsen, making it imperative to consider the most efficient use of woman-power. From now until 1960 the number of women between 18-20 is going to decline by half-a-million and there will be greater competition for their services.

A further factor is the survey being conducted by WHO and the Rockefeller Foundation in England and France on the workers needed to meet the welfare needs of the family. Although this is intended to indicate the most suitable personnel for under-developed countries, there is no doubt that as a result of the enquiries now proceeding a lead will be given on the type of training and preparation needed for that 'all-purpose' medico-social worker so badly needed to reduce the duplication and overlapping of visitors to the average home in this country. This need was clearly shown recently in an article published in Social Service, by Miss Eileen Younghusband, The Case for a Local Authority Family

* An address given at the conference on Social Medicine arranged by the Public Health Section within the Cardiff Branch of the Royal College of Nursing in April, 1953.

Welfare Service, to which Miss Mary Davies, Health Visitor Tutor to the Welsh National School of Medicine, made a spirited reply in a subsequent issue of that journal.

In addressing the annual meeting of the Institute of Almoners recently, Mr. Leslie Farrer-Brown, Secretary of the Nuffield Trust, laid considerable stress on this "all-purpose medico-social worker who will care for whole families and not 'bits' of families"—very much as the assistante sociale does in France. Finally, we should not lose sight of the volume of criticism levelled at the increased professionalism within the National Health Service and the increase in specialization which is deplored. It is said that there is a reluctance on the part of some professions, notably medicine and dentistry, to exercise control over their less efficient members. This may also be true of the nursing profession.

I do not mean by over-specialization that the duties of health visitor and home nurse will be combined. There is likely to be in the future a great development in the home nursing service because the tendency will be to keep children and old people out of hospital as long as possible and to reduce the length of stay in hospital to the minimum, not only because of cost but because of the growing importance of the general practitioner service. There must therefore be an increase in home-nursing staff—more male nurses, more State-enrolled assistant nurses. This country could not afford to provide a health visitor's training for every home nurse, but every health visitor should be capable of undertaking and supervising home nursing when required to do so. For this reason I believe that every State-registered nurse, during her basic general training, should be taught the improvisation needed to care for the sick in their own homes. With the new syllabus and the opportunities for experiment provided by the Nurses Act, 1949, every student nurse should therefore be taught the rudiments of home nursing, for some of the best nursing experience is provided 'on the district'.

These observations may not indicate very clearly what I assume to be the future function and work of the health visitor, but I hope they may help to show how her future will be influenced. The country is estimated to need 1,000 new health visitors a year to make good wastage and provide for the developments envisaged in the National Health Service Act. It is getting little more than half that number. How then can the best use be made of those who remain within the service?

Changing Clientele

As I see it, the health visitor is still primarily the teacher of parentcraft and home care in homes and centres and schools, and the interpreter of health regulations and health needs to the family. Her clientele is changing. Standards of living have improved, mothercraft is better—though housing conditions are bad and problem families remain. The frequency of home visiting can be left more to the health visitor's discretion. Mental health has become more important and the health visitor must know more about human relations. As a research worker she should be used more and more in the measurement of health problems; as a liaison officer between health department, family doctor, social agency and parent she has an important part to play. The health visitor has learnt how to observe and report on 'intangibles'—a much more difficult task than that of reporting facts.

I do not believe that social irresponsibility is more widespread today than formerly or that social health and stability is not greater today than at any time during the last 200 years. Standards of child care have enormously improved—indeed Professor Alan Moncrieff has described the first half of this century as the "age of child worship or the cult of the child". Family relationships are better today than they were 50 years ago, with less drinking and drunkenness, less illegitimacy, fewer cases of neglect or cruelty (though the spotlight is on the few) and less prostitution. There are fewer abandoned children, fewer truants from school, fewer tramps and vagrants. The proportion of parents who attend school medical examinations is steadily rising and there are fewer problem families.

In contrast to this, however, we must note that nine per cent. of persons on the Register of Disabled Persons are suffering from mental or nervous disorders and that over one quarter of the total working hours lost in employment is due to mental disturbance. Of all the hospital beds in this country 43 per cent. are devoted to patients suffering from mental ill-health. How important it is therefore that health visitors should be prepared to recognize early symptoms of neurosis and secure early treatment.

Professor Richard Titmuss recently said that our future as a nation and as an international force depended largely upon:

1. understanding ourselves—our motives, aspirations, satisfactions, way of life, attitude to one another; and
2. understanding children—recognizing (but not over-emphasizing) standards of child care, studying the child's physical health and habits, his emotional development, educational progress, together with his impact on other members of his family, his school and society.

That is no easy task. If our success as health visitors during the next 50 years is to be measured by the progress made during the last 50 years we need to recruit mature, educated women capable of benefiting from the excellent training as health visitors now possible and capable of making a real contribution to the education of the British people in healthy living.

There are many such employed as health visitors today and they are ready and willing to accept the challenge which their work offers. These may say with Wordsworth: 'Enough if something from our hands have power to live and act and serve the future hour'.

A Visit to Black Notley Hospital, Essex

MATRONS of hospitals in the North East Metropolitan Region met at Black Notley Hospital, near Braintree, on June 12, to hear and see something of the work of the hospital. The matrons have previously met annually in London to exchange ideas and meet members of the Board, but it was a happy idea to combine this annual gathering with a visit to one of the most interesting hospitals in the Region, which many of the party had not yet had an opportunity of seeing. The party was brought by coach from Chelmsford Station and after a buffet lunch they listened to short addresses on the work being carried out at Black Notley Hospital given by Miss G. Durrigan, matron, Mr. C. Wilkinson, F.R.C.S., consultant in surgical tuberculosis, and Mr. R. W. Reid, M.S., F.R.C.S. The hospital combines the functions of a general, orthopaedic and tuberculosis hospital, and an interesting feature is the special maternity unit for mothers in whom pulmonary tuberculosis has been diagnosed during pregnancy. These patients are admitted regardless of the stage of pregnancy, and on delivery the infants are cared for separately and are given BCG vaccination within their first week. Black Notley is a large hutted hospital, built as an E.M.S. hospital during the last war, and the buildings are all of the bungalow type with open-air wards for the tuberculosis patients. Of the 550 beds, some 330 are devoted to respiratory and surgical tuberculosis and in the tuberculosis units emphasis is laid on adolescents and young adults. The unusual combination of functions in this hospital makes it possible to offer facilities as a complete nurse training school, and notwithstanding its pleasant rural surroundings, so beneficial to the patients, the hospital is completely equipped with all the services, such as radiology, laboratories, physiotherapy, and children's teaching—both in the wards and in a small school in the grounds for children who are well enough to attend it. As one of the surgeons pointed out to the visitors, operations in tuberculosis cases are not avoided, as in the past, because modern antibiotics had made these possible to a greatly increased extent. But if these operations were to be successful in effecting cures, they demanded the best possible surroundings and the most efficient services—and at Black Notley Hospital they are fortunate in having both these essentials.

BOOK REVIEWS

PROTECTIVE BODY MECHANICS IN DAILY LIFE AND IN NURSING; a Manual for Nurses and Their Co-workers.—by Margaret Campbell Winters, R.N., P.T. (W. B. Saunders Company, 7, Grape Street, London, W.C.2, 17s. 6d.)

KINESIOLOGY IN NURSING.—by Bernice Fash, M.A. (McGraw-Hill Book Company, Inc., 95, Farringdon Street, London, E.C.4, 24s.)

Here are two new textbooks for nurses which have recently appeared in the United States and break comparatively new ground: they show the student nurse how to apply her anatomical knowledge of the skeleton, its joints, and the muscles which control them, to normal daily activities, and particularly the activities of her patient and herself, by economical and correct use, and with the least strain. In other words, these books attempt to help the nurse to give full support to the surgeon and the physiotherapist in ensuring early ambulation and in preventing discomfort, loss of muscle tone, and weakness during confinement to bed. These ends are met by the combination of suitable exercises, supports and good alignments. At the same time, the nurse is shown how motion studies and good mechanics can help to lessen the muscular work and reduce back-strain in the heavier tasks she has to carry out, such as lifting patients, helping them to get up when disabled, aiding them to walk correctly with crutches, and so on.

Both books are well and freely illustrated—though in different styles—with diagrams and line drawings which cannot but help the nurse to grasp the functioning of the skeletal and muscular systems: either would be a valuable addition to the textbooks available to student nurses in schools of nursing, especially in preliminary training schools. Not a few teachers of practical nursing whether in the classroom or in the wards will find these books will help them to teach better methods to the beginner from the angle of good stance and economy of effort, supported by simple reasoning which the beginner can easily follow.

Protective Body Mechanics in Daily Life and in Nursing is the least controversial and will perhaps be the more widely accepted in this country. It is divided into three parts. The first deals with the principles of body mechanics and introduces a certain amount of anatomy, physiology and physics, so that the remainder of the text can readily be followed. The second deals with factors which affect the body's mechanics from infancy through the phases when the child begins to sit up, stand and walk, to the adolescent, the adult and the older person who must modify his activities for physical reasons.

The third section applies the principles of good mechanics specifically to nursing, both from the angle of the patient and of the nurse. It is essentially practical, and information given in the earlier parts of the book is applied to bed-making, bathing the patient, moving him and carrying out treatment. In all sections, illustrations are given of wrong, as well as of correct, body mechanics, but the former are set in wavy frames, so that they are distinguished easily. Study of this section should make every student and trained nurse analyse her own nursing techniques with a critical eye and improve any faulty habit she may have acquired.

It is interesting to notice in this book that whereas the firm knee pillow or bolster has disappeared, American medical and nursing opinion has not accepted the extreme teaching so often met with in this country—namely, that there must be nothing at all under the knees when the patient is either sitting or lying flat in bed. The suggestion of a soft, folded blanket to fill the natural hollow under the knee and support the joint in its correct position of rest, that is, with about five degrees of flexion, will be appreciated by all who have experienced the discomfort of an unsupported knee when confined to bed in one position for any length of time. This compromise between two extremes of teaching is obviously satisfactory, if applied with intelligence.

Kinesiology in Nursing is divided into two parts. The first is termed an introduction to the subject and lays down sound rules for the patient in the recumbent position, and for co-ordinated movements applicable to the nurse herself and to her nursing care and treatment of the patient. She is advised, for example, to widen the base of support when standing holding an object, with elbow relaxed at the side, and the weight as near the body as possible; also not to hold the forward-bent position for long periods if this can be avoided. All these rules are of great value to the student nurse.

A chapter on muscle and joint function follows. Here there is a statement that will not be accepted by all teachers. For whereas Miss Winters writes 'when a muscle contracts, it becomes shorter and thicker' and 'as the contraction diminishes the muscle relaxes and can be elongated by the contraction of its antagonist', Miss Fash in this book states that in addition 'a muscle may be actively returned to its original length', an action which she calls 'eccentric contraction'. Apart from this, the section is excellently illustrated and cleverly shows the muscles as arms with hands grasping the bones at their insertion when contracting and pulling on them, but touching only with the fingertips when lengthening. A chart of joint and muscle action gives the movements of all parts of the skeleton, and the stronger and weaker muscles which carry out each movement, with asterisks to denote that some authorities question or omit any reference to the action of the muscle given in the table. The illustrations here are very helpful and easy to follow, though the information extends to many of the smaller muscles which a nurse in this country would not be expected to know, and might be considered more suitable for the physiotherapist. However, no information is given which could not be of value to the nurse, especially in orthopaedic departments and wards.

Part II deals with kinesiology in nursing and is excellently illustrated in a similar fashion. A large proportion of this section consists of 'Muscle Analysis Forms' of which the majority are blanks for the use of the student nurse on her own cases. One is filled in for a medical case, one for a surgical and one for an orthopaedic case. The use of the charts should certainly train the student in habits of analysing the muscular activities which she and her patient carry out and in obtaining the best possible end results in her nursing care of cases of every kind.

These books are welcome additions to the nurses' library in a specialized field, and will be valued in the reference libraries of all schools of nursing in this country: they should result in improved techniques and should lessen strain for the nurse and lead to better nursing for the patient.

MEDICAL AND NURSING DICTIONARY AND ENCYCLOPAEDIA (11th edition).—by Evelyn Pearce (Faber and Faber Limited, 24, Russell Square, London, W.C.1, 25s.)

This well-known work, now in its 11th edition and brought up-to-date, will, without doubt, retain its popularity with nurses, both before and after State-registration. It is rightly described as a dictionary and encyclopaedia and the material has been cleverly selected for its practical value to the nurse at work.

It is inevitable that in a book of this type one should wish for certain items to be dealt with in more, or less detail, or for certain others to be included. Chemotherapy should surely be mentioned in the treatment of scarlet fever however briefly the subject is dealt with. But, on the whole, it would be difficult to find a more useful and practical collection of nursing information in a book of this size and scope. The accuracy of fact and its up-to-date nature is ensured by Miss Pearce's wide experience in many branches of nursing work and by her skill in writing textbooks.

A Club for Nurses in the Midlands

ADJOINING the new Education Centre* of the Royal College of Nursing in Hagley Road, Edgbaston, Birmingham, is the College of Nursing Club. This club was founded in the early days of the College, on the initiative of Dame Ellen Musson, in collaboration with Mrs. William Cadbury, a distinguished member of the well-known family so intimately associated with Birmingham's civic and social history, who have contributed so much to the causes of nursing, public health, adult education and social welfare in general. The club was founded because Dame Ellen Musson, D.B.E., R.R.C., LL.D., S.R.N., then matron of the General Hospital, Birmingham, was convinced of the very real need to provide temporary congenial accommodation for nurses, and opportunities for meeting and entertaining their friends—facilities which are just as much appreciated today. A few permanent places in the club are reserved for retired nurse residents, but the majority of the 15 bedrooms available are for visiting nurses—many of them from overseas or abroad, nurse examiners, any nurses passing through Birmingham or private nurses making a short stay between cases. The membership fee is very moderate and College members enjoy a special fee concession. Nurses studying at the new Educational Centre will be fortunate in that they can, if they wish, enjoy membership of the club next door with all the amenities it has to offer. Canteen facilities will be available and a passageway is being made from the Centre's premises to the beautiful gardens of the College of Nursing Club, to give quick access.

A Friendly Welcome

Visitors to the club will sense at once its friendly informal atmosphere and complete absence of red tape and regulations. Here the visitor will find, not perhaps streamlined modern luxury, but rather the welcome and the creature comforts which count: really hot bath water; the gas ring on the landing so that the visitor can fill her own hot water bottle or make herself a hot drink; the electric heater readily switched on in the lounge on a chilly summer evening; and breakfast informally served 'between 8 and 9' with a cheerful 'good morning' from Cook who is all that a cook should be! Last but not least, to complete the home-like atmosphere, there are three charming cats of great character —Dickie, Caroline and Winnie (the latter probably not the only cat whose original name of Winston proved, alas, to be unsuitable!)

There is a comfortably furnished lounge with radio for visitors' use, a smaller room on the first floor used as library and writing room; the dining room, where visitors sit at small tables, is bright and cheerful and long french windows give a maximum view of the garden. Near the dining room is a conservatory, gay with flowers and supplied with small tables and chairs, where visitors can sun themselves sheltered from the wind.

A Quiet Garden

The club garden is a great asset; there is a stretch of well-tended lawn, banked with rhododendrons at one side, while on the other a beautiful copper beech spreads its shade—on a recent visit a glimpse of lemon yellow azaleas beyond made an exquisite contrast with the purplish-bronze of the newly opened foliage. Beyond is the flower and kitchen garden, supplying flowers for the club and some, at any rate, of the salads and vegetables.

Miss N. F. Jameson, secretary to the club since 1936, who acts as its hospitable hostess, is widely travelled; as a child she lived in the Falkland Islands where her father was a doctor and her uncle was responsible for building the cathedral there, of which he subsequently became the Dean. Miss Jameson returned to this country from the Falklands at the age of nine, but well remembers the wild weather of the 'roaring forties' and the wonderful wild flowers which compensate for the entire lack of trees on these wind-swept islands. In later years Miss Jameson spent four intensely interesting years as Revenue Secretary of the Y.W.C.A. in India, a travelling post which entailed seeing almost every part of India and also visiting Ceylon.

If any visitors to the new Educational Centre during the College annual meetings in Birmingham have time to drop in at the College of Nursing Club next door, Miss Jameson would be delighted to show them round and explain what membership of the club has to offer to nurses in Birmingham and district, or to visiting nurses needing hospitality.

BIRMINGHAM—

Background for the College Annual Meetings and Conferences

Above: the Ballroom of the Botanical Gardens, Edgbaston, where the Annual General Meeting and professional conference will be held.

A BEAUTIFUL setting awaits the annual meetings and conferences of the Royal College of Nursing which will take place from June 30 to July 4—Edgbaston, the delightful tree-shaded residential district of Birmingham.

Edgbaston is claimed to have derived from a Saxon settlement, and there is a Saxon ring about the original name, Egbald's ton. But the fact that in its modern guise it is so tree-filled and open and pleasant is one reason why the rich industrialists who have made Birmingham prosperous have many of them chosen to live there rather than move out into the country.

At the Botanical Gardens the spacious ballroom, which has been put at the disposal of the College for the Annual Meeting, is flanked at one side by conservatories banked with flowers; on the other, through a series of communicating arches, by the ballroom lounge, somewhat reminiscent of the passengers' lounges in an ocean-going liner. Passing from the ballroom through the conservatories, one is in the beautiful gardens themselves, charmingly laid out with lily ponds, rockeries, winding paths and rose gardens and including wide green spaces with a wonderful view. At the entrance to the Gardens is the former Birmingham home of the Chamberlains where the late Mr. Neville Chamberlain lived until 1940. This gracious house has been acquired by the Corporation who plan to carry out the needed renovation and add its rooms to the facilities offered by the larger public rooms inside the Gardens; it is in the music room that the Sister Tutor Section meetings will be held.

Those attending the annual service on Wednesday, July 1, to be held in the Cathedral Church of St. Philip, will notice the four Burne-Jones stained glass windows in very rich and lovely colourings; the one depicting the Nativity and forming part of the east window is particularly appealing in design. Burne-Jones himself was born in Bennetts Hill, a narrow street almost under the shadow of the Cathedral.

One can best savour the authentic vitality and life of the city by a visit to its real historic core—the Bull Ring. Here is situated the oldest church—the parish church of St. Martin's-in-the-Bull-Ring—certainly in existence in 1290, although entirely rebuilt in 1873. It is interesting that the church contains the tombs and effigies of the de Bermingham family who gave the town its name (the derivation is thought to be 'the home of the ingas (descendants) of Beor); their old manor enclosed in its moat lay just below St. Martin's Church, and there is little doubt that this manor and its handful of retainers formed the nucleus of the city that now numbers nearly 1,200,000.

Surrounding St. Martin's Church is the open-air market of the Bull Ring—and if you love the cheerful chaffering of such places, it is well worth a strolling inspection. Mount the steps of the old covered market (roofless since the attentions of Hitler) and here you may buy anything from budgerigars to bicycles, flowers to fishing tackle, nylons or chicken wire, fresh crabs or children's swings.

It is strange that Birmingham, famed far and wide for its civic enterprise and the high standard of its social services, is a comparative newcomer in municipal history. Actually, until nearly the end of the 18th century it was still being governed by the Court Leet with its direct link with the feudal past. The first Act constituting a regular local government was passed in 1769, but it covered only a limited field. Successive Acts gradually introduced a more democratic system, but finally a Royal Commission had to be appointed to bring order out of the chaos of anomalies and inconsistencies which still existed, and it was not until 1838 that the city received its charter from Queen Victoria. Two factors perhaps account in some measure for Birmingham's remarkable progress in civic affairs and material prosperity. The city has always shown a spirit of freedom, of political and religious tolerance and absence of restraints. The second factor is that Birmingham has been peculiarly fortunate in the great industrial families and individual pioneers who, in advance of their times, developed a social conscience and introduced—often in the face of mockery and suspicion—ideals of responsibility for the welfare of those they employed. These are almost a commonplace in industry today, but it should be remembered that they have grown from the example of people such as the Cadburys, the Chamberlains, of Joseph Sturge and William White and Josiah Mason, to name but a few. The B.B.C. Western Region recently gave a feature broadcast on the life and work of the founders of the Cadbury firm and particularly the part played by the late George Cadbury and Dame Elizabeth Cadbury. Listening to this, one realized that these pioneers in social service gave not only of their wealth, but sacrificed their comfort and leisure for their ideals. It is of happy significance that the new Educational Centre of the Royal College of Nursing in Edgbaston has been presented to the College (together with a generous sum of money towards its equipment) as a silver wedding gift to each other by Mr. and Mrs. William Cadbury, former Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress of Birmingham, who are both much interested in nurse education, as they are in many branches of work for the welfare of their fellow citizens.

EDUCATIONAL FUND APPEAL

President: The Countess Mountbatten of Burma, C.I., G.B.E., D.C.V.O.
Appeal Council: Chairman—Lady Heald Secretary—Mrs. C. M. Stocken, S.R.N.

AN encouraging response in the form of generous donations from regional hospital boards, boards of governors of teaching hospitals and hospital management committees was reported at the June meeting of the Council of the Appeal. Mrs. Stocken, secretary, reported on her recent visits to College branches at Leeds, Bradford and Nottingham where she had addressed audiences on the aims and objects of the Appeal; she had also attended a garden party at Bexhill, which was opened by Lady Hailsham, and organized in aid of the fund by the Hastings Branch. On all these occasions interesting and useful contacts had been made.

Plans for the Pageant of Nursing were proceeding and it was agreed to co-opt to the panel of advisers Miss L. G. Duff Grant, R.R.C., and a representative of the British Red Cross Society. Various influential women's organizations would be circularized with a view to gaining their interest in the pageant.

Winners of the larger money prizes in the recent Knitting and Needlecraft Competition had been notified by telegram by Messrs. Patons and Baldwins. There were 1,100 entries and the amount realized to date was £1,421 12s. 4d. As the prizewinning garments became the property of the Appeal and would be offered at a sale of work in the autumn, a further sum would be added to the total later.

The Appeal secretary reported the arrangements for the Alexandra Rose Day collections in London and also by 11 College Branches in their own areas. Nurses from London hospitals, with the kind co-operation of the authorities, had kindly promised to help in the Haymarket.

Mr. F. C. Hooper, honorary treasurer, presented the financial statement as at the end of May, and Mr. A. Sherriff reported on behalf of the Approach to Industry Committee an appeal now being made to the chairmen of a number of the large banking houses for their support.

Scottish Nursing Pageant

The Dundee Branch played its part to help the Educational Fund by presenting a Pageant of Nursing at the Gaumont Theatre, Dundee, in May. The pageant was opened by the Countess of Elgin, and two successful and well-attended performances were given. The Lord Provost of Edinburgh who attended the afternoon performance was so much impressed that he returned in the evening to move a vote of thanks to all concerned.

The idea of holding a pageant originated with Sister Nora Young of Dundee Royal Infirmary, and, in addition to her own colleagues, nurses from various Dundee hospitals agreed to participate. Mrs. Janet L. Easson wrote the script and rehearsals were soon under way with Mr. James G. Cruden as producer.

The history of nursing from earliest times to the present day was covered and the final act had a modern setting, including an operating theatre scene. In the latter, the performers revealed their professional skill and created a tense realistic atmosphere which brought much applause. An impressive finale included representatives of all branches of nursing as well as all those who had taken part.

Script, narration, production and performance were of high standard throughout, and all whose work contributed to the presentation of the pageant are to be congratulated.

Concert in the Cowdray Hall

A recital for two pianos was most kindly given by Geoffrey Tankard and Eric Harrison on May 29 in the Cowdray Hall, Royal College of Nursing. The programme, which included items by Bach, Chopin, Debussy and Rachmaninoff, was evidently much appreciated by an enthusiastic audience.

'Three Famous Cousins'

An exhibition of the portraits, books, manuscripts and plate of James Boswell (1740-1795), James Bruce (1730-1794) and Thomas Bruce, 7th Earl of Elgin (1766-1841) will be shown at Boswell's Court, Castlehill, Edinburgh, during August and September in aid of the Appeal Fund. Further details will be published later.

Sensitivity to Penicillin

Mr. Hargreaves (Carlisle) asked the Minister of Health on June 18 if he would state the number of district nurses who had developed a sensitivity to penicillin and could not undertake further nursing duties; and what special precautions were available to protect nurses exposed to this risk.

Mr. Awbery (Bristol, C.) asked a similar question.

Mr. Macleod replied that the total number of district nurses affected was not known, but a special enquiry had shown that in 70 local health authority areas 73 nurses had become sensitive to penicillin, and had had to give up nursing for varying periods. There was evidence that the incidence could be reduced by strict observance of technical precautions, and he had at once obtained advice on this from his Standing Medical Advisory Committee.

He was circulating this advice urgently to local health authorities and others concerned. Nurses who had to give up work by reason of sensitivity to antibiotics were entitled to the normal sick leave allowances and could, in appropriate cases, qualify for incapacity benefit under the National Health Service (Superannuation) Regulations. They could also, when the circumstances warranted it, qualify for industrial injuries benefit. The numbers, if any, who might have to give up nursing permanently were not yet known.

Mr. Hargreaves.—Would the Minister consider approaching the employing authority in these cases so that they may gain the requisite information from their nursing superintendent? Would he compare the means whereby penicillin is administered in the hospitals where the incidence of this sensitivity is less, and the possible means whereby this risk can be reduced for nurses who have to undertake a great deal of penicillin administration?

Mr. Macleod.—I have looked carefully into the matter, and I know there is a great deal of truth in what Mr. Hargreaves says.

Private Harrison

Wing Commander Hulbert (Stockport, North) asked the Secretary of State for War on June 16 if inquiries were now completed in regard to the death of Private Donald Harrison, of Stockport, who died in Moston Hall Military Hospital in April.

Mr. Head recalled that he had undertaken to give the House a full and frank reply on this subject, and continued,—Private Harrison, a young man aged 18, was called up for military service in January 1953 when he was passed as medically fit. On March 13 at Wrexham he reported sick with a pain in his back which the medical officer in charge of his unit diagnosed as fibrositis. He again reported sick on March 26 when the medical officer diagnosed 'Query hysteria' and ordered his admission on March 26 to the Military Hospital at Chester.

On admission he was given, by the admitting medical officer, a preliminary medical examination which included a detailed examination of the central nervous system for the purpose of allotting him to the appropriate medical division of the hospital.

The admitting officer made a firm but not final diagnosis of hysteria. This preliminary examination was correct in so far as Harrison was undoubtedly suffering from hysteria. The fact that it was not discovered that he was also suffering from a rare and malignant disease was not necessarily at this stage due to negligence since a more detailed subsequent examination should have taken place after admission to the ward.

After admission Private Harrison was required by the medical staff of the hospital to fend for himself, and other patients were forbidden to help him. The treatment of hysterical patients does require that they should be encouraged to help themselves but in no circumstances should it entail harshness. Although he complained that he could not use his legs, he was left to get about as best he could by himself. This treatment continued for five days during which time Harrison's condition deteriorated and I am satisfied that the continuance of this type of treatment was due to negligence and undoubtedly resulted in harshness. A full physical examination is always required before a diagnosis of hysteria can be justified, and should have been made on the first day in the ward. The medical specialist looking after Harrison should have satisfied himself that this had been done. This he neglected to do. Furthermore, although during these five days Harrison frequently complained of pain in his legs, thighs and back and although this was recorded by the subordinate nursing staff, the day sister in charge of the ward never drew the attention of the medical specialist to Harrison's repeated complaints. This wrong and harsh treatment was continued despite the comments and protests of at least one other patient in the ward.

It was not until Tuesday, March 31, that Harrison was seen by a psychiatrist and thereafter received sympathetic handling, but even at this stage a full examination had not been made.

On the night of April 1 the medical orderly became worried about Harrison's condition and called the orderly medical officer, and then for the first time Harrison was given a full medical examination. The orderly medical officer realized at once that Harrison was dangerously ill, and from this time he was treated for the malignant disease from which he was suffering. Harrison died early on the morning of April 5.

After Harrison's death it should have been abundantly clear to the Commanding Officer of the hospital that serious irregularities and mistakes had occurred. Yet, as far as I can ascertain, no thorough enquiry was instituted by the Commanding Officer, although on May 18 he stated that a full enquiry had already been made by himself and that he was satisfied that there was no truth in the allegations that there had been ill treatment of patients.

The Commanding Officer will be called to account for his conduct in this matter and is to be tried by court-martial. The medical specialist concerned, who left the R.A.M.C. in May, will be reported to the General Medical Council. The day sister concerned, who is a civilian, has had her contract terminated and will be reported to the General Nursing Council.

BCG Vaccine

Mr. Remnant (Wokingham) asked the Secretary of State for War on June 9 what tests with BCG vaccine were being carried out by the Army medical services.

Mr. Head.—This vaccine is not under test but is already in use by the army. Members of the Royal Army Medical Corps and Queen Alexandra's Royal Army Nursing Corps who, on testing by the Mantoux technique, appear to be susceptible to tuberculosis, are offered this form of vaccination and may not be employed in a tuberculosis ward or laboratory unless, following the treatment, a further test gives satisfactory reaction.

Staff in Mental Institutions

Mr. Fort (Clitheroe) asked the Minister of Health on June 12 what steps he was taking to deal with the shortage of nursing staff in mental hospitals and mental deficiency institutions.

Mr. Macleod in reply said that he had issued a memorandum to the hospital authorities concerned recommending a number of measures, and, in particular, more careful selection of student nurses, more extensive employment of nursing assistants to meet immediate staffing needs, systematic instruction of nursing assistants, and measures to improve staff relations. Further memoranda dealing with training questions and the organization of recruitment campaigns would be issued shortly. He was also appointing to the staff of his Chief Nursing Officer two mental nursing officers, a man and a woman, to deal with mental nursing problems.

Hospitals—Religious Worship

Mr. Anthony Greenwood (Rossendale) asked the Minister of Health on June 11 whether he would make a statement on the provision of facilities in hospitals for religious worship by patients and staff.

Mr. Macleod, in reply, said that hospital authorities had been asked to give special attention to providing for the spiritual needs of both patients and staff. A chaplain, or chaplains from more than one denomination, should be appointed for every hospital and the regular holding of services regarded as among his duties. There should be in each hospital a chapel, or a room set apart to serve as a chapel, available for any denomination wishing to use it; and hospital authorities had been asked to arrange hours of duty as far as possible to enable nurses and other staff to attend services.

Nurse Training

Mr. Awbery asked the Minister of Health on June 18 if he would, in view of the shortage of nurses, take steps to arrange a system of pre-entry training and reduce the period of general training by a short period to all pre-entrants.

Miss Hornsby-Smith, who replied, said that pre-nursing courses approved by the Minister of Education and the General Nursing Council already existed in many areas, and the local education authorities were encouraged to provide additional courses wherever they were needed. Any reduction of the general training period for students who had completed such a course would be a question for the General Nursing Council. Such students were already admitted to Part 1 of the preliminary examination before entering on the nurse-training course.

Mr. Awbery asked whether some arrangement could be made for the further training of girls between the ages of 16 and 18 who were anxious to become nurses. As they could not enter for training at 16 they often lost the desire, and their services were lost to the profession.

Miss Hornsby-Smith assured Mr. Awbery that pre-entry courses were under way. In 1951-52 there were 655 attending full time and 987 attending part time. The shortage in the general nursing service was more limited and the real problem arose over mental nursing.

PSYCHIATRIC AND MENTAL DEFICIENCY NURSING

A week of lectures and visits to psychiatric and mental deficiency hospitals is being arranged by the National Council of Nurses of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the Mental Hospital Matrons Association, in consultation with the Royal College of Nursing, beginning Monday, September 20.

Applications, from members of associations affiliated to the National Council, should be sent to the Executive Secretary, 17, Portland Place, W.1, with a stamped and addressed envelope.

CORRESPONDENCE

Moral Re-Armament

I was interested to read in the issue of June 6 the account of a meeting held in the Cowdray Hall on the work of Moral Re-armament (although surprised that the meeting occurred as long ago as March 26).

There has been much discussion of late regarding preventive medicine and measures for meeting people's needs. This is surely what Moral Re-armament is doing—helping to procure world health through unity and understanding. Therefore all genuinely concerned with the health of the nations must surely follow its activities with interest. We could do with more such news—which is news indeed since it may well prove the ultimate answer to our bed and staff problems. There will be less disease when we are at peace with ourselves and our neighbours. Then too the spirit of service will be freely and fully used, and neither exploited nor bartered.

The heading of the first item of news in Here and There on the same page prompts me to send the enclosed* with the same pertinent title and relevant contents. If our thinking is straight our minds and bodies must benefit.

BLANCHE BARRET,
College Member.

Princess Tsahai Memorial Hospital Fund

May I draw attention to the general meeting of subscribers to the Princess Tsahai Memorial Hospital Fund which is to be held on Tuesday, July 7, at Tuke Hall, Bedford College, Regents Park at 3 p.m., by kind permission of the Governors of the College, when the general purposes committee elected to raise funds for building and equipping the hospital will present their report.

A film of the opening of the hospital will be shown on this occasion.

After the general meeting a garden party will be held at 4.15 p.m. in the beautiful grounds of The Holme which adjoins Tuke Hall and which have again been kindly lent by the governors of the College.

Your many readers who have been generous subscribers to the hospital will, I know, be delighted to see in this film the opening and inspection of the hospital by their Imperial Majesties the Emperor and Empress of Ethiopia.

E. SYLVIA PANKHURST,
Hon. Secretary,
Princess Tsahai Memorial Hospital Council.

Appreciation

May I through the courtesy of the Nursing Times express my sincere appreciation of the thoughtfulness, loving-kindness and expert care shown to myself by the doctors, sisters and nurses while I was a patient recently in the Annie Zunz Ward of the Bolingbroke Hospital, S.W.11.

IVY M. B. TICKNER, S.R.N., S.C.M., D.N., Sister Tutor.

Television Gift

As President of the Manchester branch of the National Association of State Enrolled Assistant Nurses, I would like to express my thanks to the Manchester branch for their very kind thought and gesture in presenting a television set to the Christie Hospital and Holt Radium Institute. It is a very great pleasure to me to receive the set for the patients at this hospital. It will, I know, bring happiness to many sick people, as well as having given them the opportunity of seeing the Coronation of our gracious Queen.

In the tremendous work of cancer research, it is difficult to apply occupational or diversional therapy, but television brings an escape from fear, and introduces a reassuring picture of the world outside. The thought which has prompted the making of this gift is, I feel, a very precious thing, and a monument to a great Association.

G. G. GOODCHILD,
President, Manchester Branch.

New Nuneaton Unit

The Nuneaton Unit of the Student Nurses' Association has been re-formed under the presidency of Mrs. Hainson, matron of the George Eliot Hospital, Nuneaton.

The honorary secretary, Miss P. E. Sturdy, will be glad to receive suggestions of future activities from any student nurse in the Nuneaton group.

PAMELA E. STURDY,
Hillside, 49 Hinckley Road, Nuneaton.

Miss J. Williamson

Miss J. Williamson, deputy matron of Hackney Hospital, is retiring at the end of July. It is proposed to give Miss Williamson a farewell gift. Any former members of the staff who would like to be associated with the presentation should send their contributions as soon as possible to the matron of Hackney Hospital, who will acknowledge them.

The Oliver Memorial Fund for Blood Transfusion

The Committee of the Oliver Memorial Fund intend making the sixth award to the value of £50 to a British subject whose original work or services in connection with blood transfusion is considered to be a notable contribution to the research, organization or donor aspect of this subject. The Committee will welcome applications and, in addition, communications drawing their attention to suitable candidates.

Applications must be submitted before August 31 next and should be sent to the honorary treasurer, F. W. Mills, Esq., c/o National Provincial Bank Ltd., Holborn Circus, E.C.1, to whom all correspondence should be addressed.

Miss K. L. Bone

News of the death of Miss K. L. Bone, S.R.N., on March 24, will be received with regret not only in Great Britain but in distant parts of the world.

After completing her training at the Westminster Hospital in 1911, Miss Bone was appointed theatre and ward sister at St. Mary's Infirmary, Islington (now part of Whittington Hospital). Her service with the Seamen's Hospital Society, with which she was to remain for the rest of her professional career, began with her appointment in April, 1914 as night sister at the Dreadnought Seamen's Hospital, Greenwich. She volunteered for active service in September 1915 with the Q.A.I.M.N.S. Reserve and went to France, being mentioned in dispatches in March, 1919. On demobilization Miss Bone returned to the Dreadnought Hospital for a few months before being appointed ward sister at the Hospital for Tropical Diseases.

After holding the post of administrative sister at the Society's parent hospital at Greenwich for three years (during which she did a short tour of duty as matron of the Society's Queen Alexandra Hospital in Marseilles) Miss Bone was appointed matron of the Hospital for Tropical Diseases where her knowledge of the outlook of men and women returning from the tropics for treatment gave her opportunities for that personal touch which lie to the hand of matrons of comparatively small or special hospitals.

In 1934 Miss Bone returned to the Dreadnought in command of the nursing staff and the training school. Her tenure of the highest nursing appointment in the Seamen's Hospital Society was abruptly cut short in 1940 when the Dreadnought was severely bombed and Miss Bone's state of health precluded further active service. She was a founder member of the Royal College of Nursing. F. A. L.

OFF DUTY

Coronation Exhibition at St. James's Palace

ON show until July 14 in four rooms at St. James's Palace are the Coronation robes and replicas of the regalia. The most important of these are in the Throne Room which contains the very beautiful Robe of State worn by the Queen, its long train heavy with exquisite embroidery; the Imperial Mantle in cloth of gold woven with emblems in coloured silk, originally made for George IV, and the gold cloth Supertunica. Above these last two is the cloth of gold Canopy, its eagle embroidery done by the Royal School of Needlework as was also the embroidery on the Queen's robe.

The Crown Jewels on show in the Tapestry Room are replicas and were used for the final dress rehearsal in the Abbey. The two other rooms contain the Queen Mother's robe and dress of white satin and gold lamé, robes of other members of the Royal Family and examples of robes worn by other ranks, heralds of the College of Arms, etc.—altogether a most imposing display.

Admission: Tuesdays 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. 10s. 6d.; 5 p.m. to 10 p.m. 5s. Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. 5s.; 5 p.m. to 10 p.m. 2s. 6d. Special terms for parties from recognized organizations can be arranged and children under 15 are admitted at half-price.

At the Theatre

HAPPY AS A KING (Princes Theatre)

This musical frolic has certain features to recommend it. It opens with a truly lovely riot of colour, and is even more lovely in the opening of the second act. There is clever dancing by Greta Unger and Dickie Henderson, and Fred Emney as usual fills the eye and the uniforms he wears (some garments might almost be described as loose covers !). The first half drags, but later things warm up. Eve Lister as Yolande is good both to look at and listen to, and Shani Wallis is a pleasant Juliet. The book is by Fred Emney and Austin Melford.

THE PRIVATE LIFE OF HELEN (Globe Theatre)

This is light-hearted entertainment with Diana Wynyard as Helen of Troy after the war with Troy has ended. Menelaus (Cecil Parker) returns with Helen—still lovely—to his palace and their precocious and charming daughter Hermione (Janette Scott). Wars, murders and ritual sacrifice are lightly dismissed for the feminine arts to have full and pleasing expression, while unusual stage devices and a fine performance by Arthur Macrae as the wily old keeper of the gate add to the enjoyment.

The translation, from the comedy by André Roussin and Madeleine Gray from The Private Life of Helen of Troy by John Erskine, is by Arthur Macrae who also directs the production, but it may be that the comedy would sparkle more in the French idiom.

TWELFTH NIGHT (Open Air Theatre)

The Open Air Theatre at Regent's Park does not get the support it deserves. The weather is partly to blame and also, strange to say, people have the impression that it is not easily get-at-able. Yet memories of three chilly evenings in the open and one spent in the marquee are exceedingly pleasant. One does not expect, or want, the present day perfectionist productions of Stratford-on-Avon or the Old Vic—this is a simpler setting in which the players always give of their best, despite the difficulties attendant on outdoor production, and we are ordinary folk who have come to enjoy Shakespeare in a leisurely way. No theatre can compete with the Regent's Park setting, the rustling trees and the twilight calm of a summer's evening, with lighting which makes the sky a vivid backcloth.

There is much to enjoy in the current production. Brendan Barry's Orsino and Jennifer Wilson's Viola make a charming pair, and the voice of Trefor Jones as the clown does full justice to the poignant melodies. With the added comfort of a blanket, hired for 6d. at the entrance, and good coffee in the interval, there are few more pleasant ways of spending an evening in London, even a chilly night in June.

New Films

The Beggar's Opera

London in September 1741—the period painted by Hogarth—is the setting for John Gay's tuneful opera. Filmed in Technicolor, it is very well acted and sung. Laurence Olivier sings his part and has a most pleasing baritone; Stanley Holloway sings his part also, but the remainder of the principals' voices are cleverly dubbed.

The Captain's Paradise

Captain Henry St. James has been seeking for years the perfect way of life. As captain of a ferry steamer plying between Gibraltar and North Africa he at last hits upon the secret. His wife lives in Gibraltar, and caters for his domestic side, while in Kalik his romantic tendencies find happiness with Nita, a 'child of nature'. But a storm blows up—he has yet to discover that woman needs variety as much as man ! This film is great fun. The principal actor is Alec Guinness and his two women Celia Johnson and Yvonne de Carlo.

Stalag 17

Of all the prisoners in this American camp only one seems anything like a decent fellow—and he turns out to be a German masquerading as an airman. Allowing for the awful, monotonous existence, the vermin and the mixed bag the prisoners are, it is a case of every man for himself. This film is about two hours long, and hard to sit out. It has its exciting moments, and one really horrible shot of a man being questioned and kept on his feet when he is so dazed with sleep he can hardly stand upright. Starring William Holden, Don Taylor and Otto Preminger.

Scottish Study Day

A study day on the job analysis report, The Work of Nurses in Hospital Wards, was held at 44, Heriot Row, Edinburgh, on June 13. Mr. W. McInnes, M.A., Ed.B., Principal Lecturer in Method at the Training College, Dundee, acted as chairman. It was evident that the chairman had taken much trouble and given much thought to the subject, and he was able to quote most pertinently from the Report. Chapters 1, 2 and 3 were his special province and he directed the attention of those present to certain of the facts which had particularly impressed him. It was refreshing to share the impressions of a 'layman' on this much-talked-of Report.

Miss M. Macnaughton, Matron of Stracathro Hospital, Brechin, whose 'jumping-off place' was chapter 4 of the Report, was the second speaker. She was, as those who know her would expect, provocative, and spoke with her accustomed clarity. Group study took place in the afternoon on lines suggested by the chairman, and the reports of the groups were presented in the form of a symposium to an audience which was made up of those who had taken part in the study and interested people who had been invited to listen and take part in subsequent discussion. Particularly vigorous was one group in presenting their view that the number of training schools in this country is too large. It was evident that very much remains to be done by the profession as a whole to implement the ideas of these thoughtful people who contributed to this study.

Croydon and District Dinner

The Coronation Year Dinner was held on Thursday, May 28, at the Café Royal, Croydon. The chair was very ably taken by our own president, Miss M. Robinson. Among the many members and guests we were honoured to have our President of the Royal College, Miss L. J. Ottley; the Mayor and Mayoress of Croydon, Alderman S. A. Maycock, J.P., and Mrs. Maycock; Mr. J. L. Bott, Chairman of the Carshalton Urban District Council, and Mrs. Bott; Mr. A. G. Linfield, Chairman of the South West Metropolitan Regional Hospital Board and Mrs. Linfield; our liaison officer Dr. P. M. Deville; the President of the Croydon Chamber of Commerce; the Croydon Group Secretary and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Paines; and the chairman of the local division of the British Medical Association.

The dinner was a great success and many interesting speeches for the toasts were made. 'The Borough of Croydon' was proposed by Miss M. Farrer, chairman of the local branch of the Royal College of Midwives, and responded to by His Worship the Mayor; 'The Royal College of Nursing' proposed by Mr. A. G. Linfield, responded to by Miss L. J. Ottley; 'Our Guests'—proposed by Miss B. S. Wood (who we are so glad to have back with us again), responded to by an old friend, Ivor Robertson, Esq., F.R.C.S., and 'The Croydon and District Branch' proposed by the Croydon Medical Officer of Health, Dr. S. L. Wright was replied to by Miss M. Mackenzie who spoke with her usual charm and wit. Our chairman then wound up a happy and interesting evening.

Membership forms for the College may be obtained from the General Secretary, Royal College of Nursing, Henrietta Place, Cavendish Square, W.1, or local Branch Secretaries.

Cheltenham Activities

The Cheltenham Branch has recently held two events in aid of Branch funds—a whist drive at Leckhampton in May which was well patronized, and on Coronation day in the Public Gardens, Pittville, a cake and miscellaneous stall, at which great interest was taken in the Royal College of Nursing.

Kidderminster Sub-Branch

A Coronation bazaar was held in the grounds of Blakebrook Hospital on Saturday, June 6. Of the £120 realized, £50 is being sent to the Educational Fund Appeal and £50 to the Royal College of Nursing Elderly Nurses Fund.

Sister Tutors in Kent

The Sister Tutor Section in Kent held its quarterly meeting on May 30 at the Royal Seabathing Hospital, Margate, by kind invitation of Miss Harcourt, matron. An interesting discussion took place on the job analysis, at the conclusion of which it was decided that greater liaison was necessary between the ward sister, the doctor, the sister tutor, and the matron.

NURSES APPEAL COMMITTEE

Nation's Fund for Nurses

A new reign has begun which we hope will be long and happy and will bring peace and prosperity. We hope it may be the beginning of a new age of happiness and welfare throughout the world. We must not neglect what is our plain duty, and our thoughts turn especially to those in our profession who are in need of financial assistance. We hope that help for them may be given faithfully and regularly. Please do not let this appeal be forgotten, but let us make the best contribution of which we are capable. We are most grateful for the donations listed below.

London Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Dossetor after the wedding.

The marriage of Miss Jean Calder and Mr. Daniel R. Dossetor took place on Saturday, June 20, at Holy Trinity, Brompton. Many of Miss Calder's friends and colleagues associated with her work in Manchester and London were present and a lovely day added to the happy occasion. At the reception later at the Rembrandt Hotel, Sir Allen Daley proposed the toast of the bride and bridegroom in a delightful speech. Mr. Dossetor, in replying for them both, gave a glimpse of the persuasive power and charm which had resulted in his bride relinquishing her position as a leading member of the nursing profession of this country. In September Mr. and Mrs. Dossetor leave for Australia, where he has close contacts both with the nursing profession through his daughter, and with the social services.

Westminster Abbey Appeal

Until July 3 there is still an opportunity for those who wish not only to see the Abbey as the setting for the Coronation, but also a moving and courageous drama, in aid of the appeal which was opened by Sir Winston Churchill in January. Out of the Whirlwind by Christopher Hassall, which is being presented in the Abbey, is based on the ancient story of Job—'Then the Lord answered Job out of the whirlwind, and said, " . . . . Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth? declare if thou hast understanding . . . ."'

The modern story is of a woman of today who has lived through two world wars and known bitterness, suffering and destruction, but knows, too, the history, tradition and greatness of the nation and of the Abbey as part of the very pattern of its life. Fay Compton plays the woman, Martha, with sureness, while the large cast includes a group of Miracle Players from the 14th century and great characters from Shakespeare's historical plays. Dr. Opprobrius, the evil one; Dr. Fountaine, Canon of Westminster, and John Protheroe, a literary man, give continuity through the changing crises from 1914 to 1952. Realities and trivialities are presented as part of the life of the people and, therefore, as not being out of place in the Abbey itself, while the occasional music, the voices of choristers above and unseen, the words of familiar psalms, and the artistry of the lighting in so splendid and lovely a setting create something unique and moving.

The result is not just a drama but an expression of the place that Westminster Abbey holds in the minds and hearts of countless people. Those who are unable to see the play can still send a contribution to the Dean and Chapter, and so help to protect the Abbey and its magnificent history beyond their own generation.

Coronation Festivities

LINCOLN BRANCH

The Lincoln branch was honoured to represent the nursing profession in the city's Coronation carnival procession. A tableau was arranged depicting nursing from the time of Elizabeth I to the present day. Tudor nursing was followed by Sairey Gamp and Betsey Prigg, who were realistically hilarious on the 'contents' of an empty gin bottle.

Then came Miss Florence Nightingale with her ladies at Scutari and finally a representative of each branch of the present-day civilian and Forces nursing services. In addition there was a marching contingent of nurses and nursing-cadets.

The courage of the nursing profession was illustrated by the fact that the procession took place in pouring rain and with a strong cold wind!

THE ROYAL SOUTHERN HOSPITAL, LIVERPOOL

Coronation eve, nearly midnight and a tired, modest surgeon was operating late with emergencies. Theatre night nurse had taken many telephone messages and was weary of the telephone, when once again it calls. "Is Mr. —— operating?" "Yes, can I take a message, please?" "Will you tell him that they are on top of Everest?" Nurse—with thoughts on sterilizers and the work yet to be done—wonders if she has heard aright and says, "I beg your pardon, did you say, 'top of Everest'?" "Yes, please tell him now, there is no answer, he will understand". "Very well" . . . and wondering and recalling about outside events, the nurse goes back into the quiet and yet busy theatre and awaiting a suitable opportunity, she murmurs diffidently to the surgeon, "Excuse me, sir, but I am asked to tell you that they are on top of Everest"! "What!" and all tiredness gone, the erstwhile sedate surgeon actually jumps for joy and executes a short dance . . . His cousin is in the team and we had not known . . . he is as thrilled as though it were himself, and so are we.

Two days later, and a popular and well loved surgical ward sister of very many years hears that she has been awarded a Coronation Medal. Great excitement and pleasure—it was as though we had all had one. We joined the queue to the ward to see the medal and offer our congratulations on an honour so well deserved. Not least was the pleasure of her patients, who by noon, in some mysterious way, had collected and purchased a charming gift to join with their good wishes and praise of the choice.

Truly an exciting week and we feel that we have shared in both momentous events—the conquest of Everest and the Coronation.

SARAH MEE (née BARKER), S.R.N., S.C.M., Queen's Nurse, H.V.Cert., Nursing Administration (Public Health) Cert., Royal College of Nursing, took up her appointment as County Nursing Officer on May 1. Mrs. Mee trained at Beverley Road Hospital, Hull, took midwifery training at Westcotes Maternity Home, Leicester, and Queen's training with the Three Towns Nursing Association, Plymouth. She was a staff nurse at Doncaster Royal Infirmary, and district nurse/midwife with Holland (Lincs.) County Council where she was later assistant county nursing officer for two years. She was a sister in the maternity department at Stamford and Rutland General Infirmary, Lincs. in 1941 and a health visitor with Northumberland County Council. Since 1950 she has been Deputy County Nursing Officer, Cornwall County Council.

Royal Hospital, Wolverhampton and its Branches

MISS HELEN G. RITCHIE, S.R.N., R.S.C.N., S.C.M., Housekeeping Cert., took up her appointment as matron on June 1. After training in Edinburgh at the Royal Hospital for Sick Children, the Royal Infirmary and Simpson Memorial Maternity Pavilion, Miss Ritchie took the housekeeping course at the Westminster Hospital in London. She has been staff nurse at the Royal Infirmary, Edinburgh, ward sister at the Cumberland Infirmary, Carlisle, assistant tutor at Glasgow Royal Infirmary, after posts as night sister, night superintendent and matron's office sister at the London Hospital, Whitechapel, and assistant matron at West London Hospital.

NURSING SCHOOL NEWS

At Darlington Memorial Hospital and Hundens Unit Miss D. R. Gibson, matron, The General Hospital, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, presented the awards. The prize for the best practical senior nurse for 1952 went to Miss J. M. Simpson.

The General Infirmary at Leeds

THE Viscountess Ridley, J.P., presented the medals and prizes after being introduced as one who had done so much for the patients of this country, by Alderman Sir George W. Martin, K.B.E., LL.D., J.P., who presided at the ceremony.

Miss Jean Goodger received the Eva Moynihan gold medal and £5 prize, also a senior nursing prize; Miss M. Appleby was the silver medallist. Miss P. Elliott was awarded the Elizabeth Fisher Memorial prize (first) for practical nursing and Miss P. Crompton who received the principles and practice of nursing prize qualified also for four other awards.

Miss K. A. Raven, matron, reported on the varied work and developments in the hospital and nursing school. Two sisters now shared the duties of a ward, and the new syllabus of the General Nursing Council had been introduced with emphasis on social and preventive medicine. Sisters' study days had been outstandingly successful; international contacts had been numerous and Miss Raven was to be one of the members from this country to attend the forthcoming Congress in Brazil.

Lady Ridley in her address emphasized three essential qualities for nursing—imagination, courtesy and the sense of obligation in return for privilege. It was most important that the nurse should understand and care for the patient and not just become absorbed in ward administration. (A picture was published in the June 6 issue).

Netherne Hospital, Coulsdon, Surrey

MISS M. Henry, Registrar, General Nursing Council for England and Wales, presented the prizes and certificates on April 21, in the recreation hall at the hospital. Mr. W. H. Glanville, chairman of the Netherne Hospital Management Committee, opening the proceedings, and welcoming the guests said that they hoped to make the prizegiving an annual event.

Miss M. Smith, matron, in making her report, announced that Miss E. M. Webb, former matron of the hospital, had presented a prize, to be presented annually in perpetuity, for 'the best practical nurse during her three years of training'. It would be known as the 'Webb prize'. Commenting on the new General Nursing Council syllabus, Miss Smith thought it went some way to meet modern demands; in particular, it gave the student a much more complete idea of the patient as an individual. Miss Smith regretted that there was still overcrowding in the wards—the problem of so many mental hospitals; the more this problem could be solved, the more the modern treatments of mental illness could be pursued and developed. Mrs. M. Fraser, principal tutor, gave her report on the training school.

After distributing the awards, Miss Henry addressed the nurses. There was perhaps a risk, she thought, that student nurses training in a mental hospital might feel themselves rather isolated from the other branches of the profession, and if she could do anything to dispel this idea she would have accomplished something worth while. "You have a tremendous number of people", said Miss Henry, "interested in your particular problems."

The silver medallist was Miss Sarah Cosgrove, and Miss Mary Govern won the bronze medal. The Webb prize was awarded to Miss Catherine Lynch, and Mr. P. M. Grant received the Chairman's essay prize. Prizes for psychiatry were awarded to Miss E. M. H. Hoogenboom, Miss M. Jones and Miss V. J. Pye.

The delightful hospitality enjoyed by the guests after the ceremony was enhanced by the beautiful setting of the hospital on a cloudless day of brilliant spring sunshine. (Picture June 6).

Seated in front of prizewinners at Bellsdyke Mental Hospital are Mrs. J. A. Jenkins (second from left) who presented the prizes, with Dr. Jenkins, physician superintendent, and Miss M. Sullivan, matron (centre). The silver medallist was Miss J. C. Wilson, and the medical nursing prize went to Mr. J. R. Hebda.

Below: a group at the Victoria Hospital, Blackpool, after Mrs. Josephine Fielding had distributed the awards. The winner of the gold medal was Miss H. F. Oakden. Miss S. M. Corrigan received the silver medal, and Miss B. H. Moody the bronze medal.

Harrow Hospital

HARROW Hospital held its annual prizegiving in the speech room of Harrow School on April 25. The speaker was Mr. Howard Marshall, a member of the board of governors of Charing Cross Hospital.

Miss E. Martin, matron, reported that the group preliminary training school was in full operation; during the past year, results of the State examination and the hospital examination had been good. She thanked all who had helped in the training of the nurses, and praised the teamwork of her staff.

Mrs. Howard Marshall presented the prizes and certificates. Prizes for practical nursing were as follows: first, Miss Audrey Wayte; second, Miss Louisa Rankin; junior student nurse, Miss Annie Carr. (Picture June 6).

soluble aspirin with codeine phosphate and phenacetin

Codis presents a familiar grouping of analgesic drugs; aspirin, phenacetin, codeine phosphate; with an important advantage. The "aspirin" in Codis is rendered soluble, as in 'Solprin'.

Placed, uncrushed, in water, a Codis tablet disperses in a matter of seconds to form a solution of calcium aspirin and codeine phosphate with finely suspended phenacetin. The chance of irritation of the gastric mucosa by undissolved particles of aspirin is thus minimised.

Codis is recommended for all those conditions for which Tab. Codein. Co. B.P. would be prescribed. It has the added advantages of greater ease of administration and far less likelihood of aspirin intolerance, while the rapid absorption of the soluble aspirin promotes prompt relief.

COMPOSITION Each Codis tablet contains:—Acid. Acetylsalicyl. B.P. 4 grs., Phenacet. B.P. 4 grs., Codein Phosph. B.P. 0.125 grs., Calc. Carb. B.P. 1.2 grs., Acid. Cit. B.P. (Exsic.) 0.4 grs., Excip. ad. 11.45 grs.

Codis is not advertised to the public

FOR CLEANING UP

When Domestos and Stergene are made available other cleansing materials are unnecessary. Domestos and Stergene between them fulfil every cleansing need from dishwashing in the canteen (and how china sparkles when washed with Stergene) to swabbing factory floors.

Stergene is soapless and a wonderful grease remover. A teaspoonful in a bucket of water is enough for general cleaning, so it is truly economical.

Domestos is a hypochlorite with all the disinfectant properties which would be expected of a product twenty times stronger than carbolic acid. Very small quantities are sufficient to ensure scrupulous cleanliness—particularly in lavatories and toilets.

Excerpts from a few of the many Laudatory Reviews

" THE NURSING TIMES ": " This excellent textbook from New Zealand can be warmly recommended to student and trained nurses in this country. . . . It is to be hoped that this book will become appreciated as a standard textbook of surgery for nurses in the training schools in Great Britain."

The " PRACTITIONER ", London: " This is probably the best book on surgery for nurses that has yet appeared. The author is a well-known New Zealand surgeon and the book represents his experience in delivering courses of lectures in surgery to nurses for more than twenty years."

The " NEW ZEALAND MEDICAL JOURNAL": " The book, of pleasing format, calls for congratulations to the author and reflects credit on the publisher. It can be thoroughly recommended to students of nursing, not only in this country, but further afield."

The " NEW ZEALAND NURSING JOURNAL": " This book has appealed as the most suitable textbook to date for nurses in training as it covers adequately and well, all aspects of surgery for nurses. It should be in every nurses' library and can be highly recommended as the textbook of choice in training schools."

The "AUSTRALIAN NURSES' JOURNAL": " It is a pleasure to review this textbook from New Zealand. . . . Founded on Dr. Cairney's nursing lectures, this is indeed an excellent book for the teaching of nurses, in which it is obvious that he has had a great deal of experience. It is well printed and contains numerous simple diagrams drawn by the author himself. One can thoroughly recommend this manual both for the teacher of surgical nursing and his pupils."

The " NURSING MIRROR ": " The nurse in training who finds this book in her reference library will certainly obtain from it that clear conception of the basic principles of surgical treatments which will enable her more easily to attain the detailed knowledge expected of—and needed by—the trained nurse."

The " ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL GAZETTE ": "An excellent book with an attractive title. . . . The book is well planned. The subject matter is presented concisely, and the simplicity of the diagrams is a commendable feature of the book. . . . Such a textbook gives great support to classroom teaching."

From the Director, Division of Nursing, Wellington, New Zealand: " It has now been decided that John Cairney's ' Surgery for Students of Nursing ' should be accepted as a standard textbook in all training schools for nurses in New Zealand."

Nurses outside New Zealand may obtain this Textbook through their usual Medical Bookseller, or direct from the publishers.

A Money Order or Bank Draft for £2 plus 8d. postage, in New Zealand currency, must accompany each order.

So safe...so effective...so economical

Quinolor Ointment possesses the properties which doctors and nurses look for in an antiseptic preparation for local application. It is effective against a variety of disease-producing organisms, economic and simple to use, stable during prolonged periods, it very rarely produces allergic reactions and it promotes healing.

The main indications for Quinolor Ointment include impetigo, sycosis barbae, folliculitis and many other infective skin diseases of an acute or chronic nature. Further information will gladly be supplied on request.

Supplied in tubes of 1 oz. and jars of 1 lb.

The District Nurse's Advice

"They kill pain in a few minutes."

"The District Nurse lives two doors away. One day I stopped her. Could she recommend anything to relieve me of my monthly pain? I'd tried several so-called remedies, I told her, but nothing helped much. It was she who put me on to Anti-Kamnia tablets," says Mrs. M. "They kill pain in a few minutes." Anti-Kamnia is specially made for women who suffer from periodical pain and headaches. Its unique formula contains no aspirin. It cannot harm the heart or upset digestion. Instead it goes straight to work, quickly soothing pain of all kinds and bringing sweet relief. Next time don't give pain a chance. Take a couple of A.K. tablets, available at all chemists.

BABIES EAGERLY ACCEPT INGRAM'S
...the TEAT that's guaranteed shape-and-flow-perfect

Any baby will take readily to one of the three specially designed Ingram shapes which cover every bottle-feeding need. Made from the finest quality sterilizable transparent rubber, INGRAM'S Teats are anti-colic. Ingram's ensure a contented, uninterrupted feed because every teat is individually TESTED FOR FLOW. The patent spiral band feature prevents the teat being accidentally pulled off the bottle.

"The Army needs Trained Nurses"

"That's why I joined the Queen Alexandra's Royal Army Nursing Corps. Being a State Registered Nurse, I thought that this was a wonderful chance—and I was right! Here I am doing an interesting, vitally important job as a commissioned officer—a job rich in companionship. What's more, it may take me overseas. The pay is good. There's an initial grant of £185 10s. for uniform and 6 weeks' leave a year. Yes, it's a worthwhile life in the Q.A.R.A.N.C.!"

You can join if you are a S.R.N. and in possession of the School Certificate or recognised equivalent; a British subject; medically fit; under 35; single (or a widow without dependants).

Short service commissions are granted for 8 years, 2, 4, 5, or 6, served with the Active Army and the remainder in the Reserve. After 6 months' service, you may apply for a regular commission.

Free courses open to regular officers include training for sister-tutor's diploma, and courses in these subjects: operating theatre, chest surgery, psychiatry, midwifery (part II) and Army administration.

Pay is £296 a year for a lieutenant on appointment. As a captain with six years' service you would earn £396 a year. Of course, this is in addition to rations and quarters, provided free or paid for by allowances.

Gratuities of £110, £260, £325 and £390 are granted on retirement after 2, 4, 5 and 6 years' service on a short service commission.

How about you?

Royal Babies

Every mother knows that during the early formative years, correct feeding for her baby is the most important thing of all. The daily bottle must have a carefully balanced quota of carbohydrates, proteins, minerals, vitamins and fat. If natural feeding fails Cow & Gate Milk Food, made by the special Cow & Gate process, meets all requirements and ensures steady and sturdy growth.

Royal babies are sure to be given the best, and up to date fourteen have been fed on Cow & Gate. Give your baby the best food and the best possible start in life.
